World-Class Cast of Honorees Highlight 2013 Ski Affair

The story lines of 2013 edition of the University of Utah J. Willard Marriott Library's Ski Affair are laced with so much world-class history that they would fill volumes – lots of volumes.

Here's what is in the offing for the Oct. 16 gathering of some 500 ski enthusiasts:

-- Ted Ligety, a Park City native, winner of three events in the 2013 world ski championships, winner of four World Cup ski titles, an Olympic Gold medalist in 2006 and a heavy favorite to finish on the podium often at the 2014 Olympic Winter Games in Russia, will receive a History-Maker Award.

-- Sarah Hendrickson, a Park City native, reigning world women's ski jumping champion, winner of nine World Cup events for a World Cup title and heavy favorite to medal in the 2014 Olympic Winter Games in Russia, will receive a History-Maker Award.

-- Ted Johnson, one-time California surfer and Alta ski instructor, handyman and lodge manager who founded world renowned Snowbird Ski and Summer Resort in 1971 (and has the distinction of having the Little Cottonwood Canyon sewer line named in his honor), will receive the prestigious S.J. Quinney Award for his outstanding contributions to skiing in the Intermountain West.

--Park City Mountain Resort, originally named Treasure Mountain Resort, will be celebrated for embarking on its 50th winter season of internationally known winter recreational offerings and for being the catalyst for Park City being named "The Best Town in America" in the September issue of Outside Magazine.

Add to that glittering list of honorees a vibrant 6 p.m. reception and cash bar, a bargain-packed silent auction, an exceptional buffet dinner at 7:15 p.m. and some fun ski video footage and you have the makings of a ski history gala of galas.

The Ski Affair is the annual fund raiser for the Ski Archives that was established at the University of Utah in 1989. Renowned world-wide, the archive includes exceptional collections of ski photos and films, historic files of the region's ski resorts, the records of the Salt Lake Bid and Organizing Committees for the 2002 Olympic Winter Games, numerous personal collections and countless other materials -- all of which are available to researchers, historians, reporters and the general public at no cost.

The Ski Affair will take place on Wednesday, Oct. 16, at the Little America Hotel in downtown Salt Lake City.

Open to the public, the dinner and gala cost $70 per person or $1,500 for a reserved table of 10. Reservations should be made by Oct. 10, 2013. Please contact Judy Jarrow at the Marriott Library

As Utah's Winter Sports Scene Glistens Throughout the World, Ted Johnson to Receive U. Library's Quinney Award

Ted Johnson: Snowbird and a Sewer Line

The S. J. "Joe" Quinney Award is presented by the Utah Ski Archives to an individual or organization that has made "significant contributions to skiing" in the Intermountain West. It is presented by the Quinney family to perpetuate the vision and fortitude of its namesake, Joe Quinney, who, in 1938, spearheaded the establishment of Alta, Utah's first ski area, and thus earned him the title of "the father of Utah's ski industry." A prominent Salt Lake City lawyer, Quinney died in 1983.

Ted Johnson, 2013 recipient of the Quinney Award, fulfills the award's criteria to the Nth degree.

Johnson, a California native and hearty beneficiary of its beaches and surfing, worked as a handyman, photographer, ski instructor and lodge manager at Alta where he became a world-class powder skier, appearing in Warren Miller ski films and on the cover of Sports Illustrated magazine.

His "significant contributions" to skiing are two-fold – and huge!

1. Ted founded today's world-renowned Snowbird Ski and Summer Resort in 1971, thus putting Utah skiing on the national and international maps of destination ski areas. He was inducted into the Intermountain Ski Hall of Fame in 2007.

2. Ted spearheaded the 1971 construction of a seven mile-long, $450,000 privately-funded sewer line that runs the length of the Little Cottonwood Canyon, thus eliminating the use of septic tanks in the canyon, which is a major Salt Lake City watershed. For that he has the dubious distinction of having a sewer line bearing his name.

Quite appropriately, the S. J. "Joe" Quinney Award is comprised of a small plaque mounted on a cantaloupe-sized hunk of granite rock from Little Cottonwood Canyon.

Previous S. J. Quinney Award recipients include: Alf Engen, Joe Quinney, Nick Badami, Charles "Chick" Morton, Earl Miller, Wilby

Durham, M. Earl Miller , Junior Bounous , Spencer F. Eccles, Stein Eriksen, Corey Engen, Zane Doyle, Suzy Rytting, Janet Quinney Lawson, Edgar Stern, Karen Korfanta , Russ Harmer, Jim Gaddis and, in 2012, John W. Gallivan.

HISTORY-MAKER AWARD HONOREE THEODORE SHARP “TED” LIGETY

Somewhere there’s a ski coach saying “oops.”

That would be the coach who told a young Ted Ligety that he wasn’t good enough to be a member of his ski team.

That’s the same Ted Ligety who in 2013 became a triple world champion in giant slalom, super G and combined; who became the fifth man in history to win three or more gold medals at one world championship and first in 45 years since Jean-Claude Killy won four in 1968.

What’s more, the Park City native and one-time “student” at its Winter Sports School, is the first racer of either gender to win the super G, giant slalom and combined at One World championships.

Ted was the 2006 Olympic gold medalist in combined and four-time World Cup champion in giant slalom (2008, 2011 and 2013). He won the gold medal in giant slalom at the 2011 World Championship and successfully defended his world title in giant slalom in 2013, where he also won an unexpected gold medal in the super G and a third gold medal in the super combined.

Through March 2013, Ligety had 17 victories (all in giant slalom) and 37 podiums in World Cup competition. He is expected to be a major contributor to the medals count for the U.S. Ski Team that will compete in the 2014 Olympic Winter Games in Sochi, Russia.

No doubt, those are accomplishments of historical proportions. For those accomplishments -- and more -- Ted Ligety will receive the 2013 History-Maker Award from the Ski Archives.

HISTORY-MAKER AWARD HONOREE SARAH HENDRICKSON

Talk about taking flight –

As a snow bunny, Sarah Hendrickson would seek out every bump and mogul on a ski run and jump off it for the excitement of being airborne for just a moment. Harkening back to those snow bunny days, she recalls being smitten by ski jumping at age 7 after watching her older brother enjoy the sport for two years while she remained earthbound.

That was then. Now, the 19-year old Hendrickson sails off the world’s biggest ski jumps for distances as long as a football field. What’s more, she is the reigning world champion in women’s ski jumping and the marquee member of the U.S. Women’s Ski Jumping Team that will compete in the first Olympic Winter Games open to women’s ski jumpers in Sochi, Russia in 2014.

Sarah Hendrickson

The 19-year old Park City native and a graduate of its Winter Sports School was crowned world champion in 2013 after winning nine of 13 events in the Inaugural World Cup Championships in 2012.

She finished second in World Cup overall competition in 2013 and won a silver medal in the 2012 Junior World Championships. Before that she won the bronze medal in her sport in the 2010 Junior World Championships.

After missing the 2012 U.S. Ski Jumping Championships to recover from knee surgery, she won that nation title in competition at her “home hill” at Utah Olympic Park in August 2013.

For all those historic accomplishments, Sarah Hendrickson will receive the 2013 History-Maker Award from the Ski Archives.

University of Utah Ski Team to Host 2014 NCAA Championships and Alumni Reunion

For the past two years the University of Utah has seen itself as “the bridesmaid” to the NCAA ski champions from the University of Vermont in 2012 and the University of Colorado in 2013.

The Ute team is anxious to become the “bride” in 2014 collegiate championships at Park City Mountain Resort and at Solder Hollow.

The event will take place March 5-8, 2014, starting with the giant slalom at Park City Mountain Resort. The 5- and 10-km classic interval start cross-country races will follow on March 6 at Soldier Hollow, the site of those events during the 2002 Olympic Winter Games. Slalom competition will take place at PCMR on March 7. The final event is scheduled at Soldier Hollow on March 8, with a mass start 15- and 20-km free cross-country race. The team headquarters will be the Park City Marriott Hotel – Prospector.

Kevin Sweeney, Director of Skiing for the University of Utah said, “We are ecstatic to have the NCAA Skiing Championships return to Utah. The support we receive from the university, the competition venues as well as from the volunteers and alumni is outstanding. I know the best collegiate athletes in the country are anxious to race here.”

Sweeney also noted that the NCAA championships are “a perfect time for us to host a U. of U. Ski Team Reunion. U. alumni and spectators are encouraged to join us at the competition and special events.”

Reunion events scheduled to coincide with the competition include the races, a tour of the U campus, a BBQ following the ski awards and a reunion party. Package information will be emailed to ski team alumni soon, according to Barbara Yamada, general chair of the events. Leading to the week’s activities, the U’s J. Willard Marriott Library Ski Archives will feature displays of the history of the U ski team in the 4th floor George S. Eccles reading room. A special exhibit also is planned at the Alf Engen Ski Museum at the Utah Olympic Park.

For information on the events or to volunteer please contact Barbara Yamada, Tournament Manager- barbyamada@gmail.com.

2013 Intermountain Ski Hall of Fame

The Intermountain Ski Hall of Fame was held at the Alf Engen Ski Museum in Park City on Sept. 26, 2013.

This year’s Honorees are:

Dean Perkins won numerous downhill and giant slalom titles in U.S. national competitions from 1950-1955. He was a member of the U. S. FIS World Cup Team in 1950-1951 and won the inaugural Roche Cup on Aspen Mountain that season. He later ran a popular ski shop in Ogden, Utah for 20 years.

Between 1974 and 1976, Alan Schoenberger had 16 first and second place international finishes in ski ballet, including the 1976 World Championships. He and his father later developed the ski carpet used at indoor training sites and in his famous ski entertainment shows.

The late Dr. Robert Smith was an orthodontist who made his first ski goggles by hand in the mid 1950’s using dental tools, foam and glue. He later formed Smith Goggles, which in the 1970’s became the leading ski goggle in the United States.

LeRoy Schultz is a mechanical engineer and national expert on designing, building and inspecting safer ski lifts, trams and gondolas. A native of Ogden, Utah and a graduate of the University of Utah, Schultz constructed more than 40 chairlifts in North America and was regional tramway engineer for the U.S. Forest Service in Idaho and Montana.

PARK CITY MOUNTAIN RESORT: 50 YEARS AND COUNTING

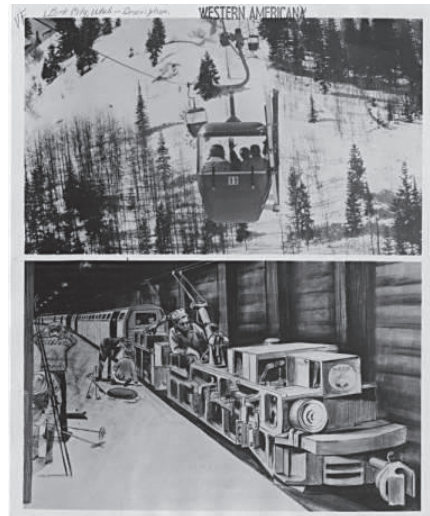

By Andy Miller, Communications Manager, Park City Mountain Resort

Park City's first skiers could never have known what they were starting. As early as the 19th century, "Parkites" were strapping 10 foot long pieces of wood to their feet in order to navigate Park City during its snowy winters.

Rather than recreational, these skis served a more practical purpose for residents of this frontier town built on the mining boom: for them it was transportation.

Almost a century later, Park City's economy and identity were changing--going from a depressed and dilapidated mining community to a ski area. The area, first known as Treasure Mountains Resort, became Park City Ski Area, and today is Park City Mountain Resort (PCMR). During the next 50 years, Park City, anchored by Park City Mountain Resort, would blossom into one of America's greatest ski towns. While the skis and snowboards that Park City Mountain Resort's guests bind into today bear little resemblance to those first skis of the 1880s, the mountain itself maintains a great deal of its mining heritage. This winter, in celebrating 50 years of skiing and snowboarding in Park City, PCMR looks back on the history that has shaped it, while looking forward to its next half century as one of the industry's most innovative and progressive mountain resorts.

Treasure Mountain Resort opened for business on December 21, 1963 with a state-of-the-art gondola to show off and a staff of lift operators, maintenance workers and snow groomers made up largely of one-time miners. The mountain's "Skiers' Subway" was a distinctly Park City feature: a system of retro-fitted cars that traveled the old mining tunnels, carrying skiers three miles into one of the peaks before passengers then loaded onto a hoist and rode 1,800 feet up to the surface.

Today, PCMR's guests enjoy the comforts of high-speed six-person detachable lifts and the convenience of ride-on conveyors. From those lifts, guests access runs observing Park City's mining legacy – King Con, Double Jack and Jupiter Bowl, to name a few. Those runs take guests by landmarks that stand as living testaments to that history; Mid-Mountain Lodge, now one of the resort's most popular lunch locations, was originally a turn-of-the-century boardinghouse for miners.

While observing that rich past, Park City Mountain Resort today is one of North America's most innovative mountains: pioneering the latest technologies in snowmaking and grooming; hosting world-class competitions, such as the Olympic Winter Games of 2002 and pushing action sports progression with four terrain parks and two half-pipes.

That progression continues as Park City Mountain Resort looks ahead to its next half century, all the while mindful of the heritage that began when Park City locals first strapped those wooden skis to their feet just to get around.

When all that snow melts, where does it go? Down the river, of course. River runners and skiers have a long history together; the Quinney family, along with

SKI BOARD MEMBERS GONE TOO SOON

Sadly, the Ski Archives Advisory Board lost two of our active members this past year.
